Step 1, Write your own survey. This is most effective if you have access to a large group of people, such as a class of students or an office. Keep the questions basic so that you can get a good number of similar responses. For example, you could ask about favorite colors, or what they had for breakfast. Asking something more subjective, like favorite movies, will cause too much variation.[1]Step 2, Find online surveys. If you don't have a group to survey, or you don't get enough similar ...
