As a resident of Los Angeles you hear a lot of talk about "sex" and "sushi." It seems that these are two things that Angelenos highly esteem. So when I came across the book, "Sex, Sushi & Salvation: Thoughts on Intimacy, Community, & Eternity" by Christian George, I knew I must pick it up. Rarely do you see the word "salvation" in the previous word mix, but I knew as a college pastor these are important topics to the community I minister to.

If there is one idea that comes up in every lecture at Acton University, it is a particular view of the human person mentioned in shorthand as "Christian anthropology." This view of the human being as a person made in the image of God, made free, and having an essence or nature is integral to the second most bandied idea here at Acton—natural law.
