Sit down, take a deep breath: this poem's intense. An unnamed
speaker ruminates
about the abortions she's had. She thinks about the children and

directly, and tells them that she was not

"deliberate" in her decision to have an abortion.
