SHIN HANGA | The Art of Japan

Shin-hanga was an art movement in early 20th-century Japan, during the Taishō and Shōwa periods, that revitalized traditional ukiyo-e art rooted in the Edo and Meiji periods. It maintained the traditional ukiyo-e collaborative system where the artist, carver, printer, and publisher engaged in division of labor, as opposed to the sōsaku-hanga movement which advocated the principles of "self-drawn", "self-carved" and "self-printed", according to which the artist, with the desire of ...

Bijin-ga of the Shin Hanga Art Movement. The shin hanga art movement of the first half of the century after circa 1910 saw a renaissance of the genre of bijin-ga as images of female beauty without any negative connotations. The images are no longer the stereotype faces of the Edo period. The artists now show modern, self-confident women with individual facial features.
